RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT

For many years, Black Series Campers has undertaken an extensive research and development program to help with the future design and construction of our trailers.

Our trailers have seen it all. We were the first company to regularly undertake trips with the crew from Australian 4WD Action to bring you first hand footage of just how tough our trailers are and the type of terrain they can handle.

Black Series Campers has engaged third party engineering and testing organizations to further assess the critical components on our trailers to ensure that all trips go smoothly.

Our chassis and suspension have been modified, altered, and improved for the duration of last 10 years so you'll always know our technology will always be up to date and better every year.

Our vehicles drive thousands of kilometers on every kind of road condition imaginable to make sure our suspension components are truly up to the task.

Our ADR compliant Black Series Off-Road hitch has been designed and tested to withstand extreme loads. Cyclic testing simulates a lifetime of towing and off-road use and conforms to the requirements of statutory authorities in every state.

At Black Series Campers, we believe that we've never gotten it more right than with us. We're sure that you will think so, too.

*Disclaimer: The product illustrated is correct at time of publishing however, Black Series constantly look to improve product design, functionality and safety. Specifications and appearance may change without notice and we advise you to check with a Black Series professional to ensure the current specifications meet your requirements. Trailers are shown with Options Pack. All weights do not include options, annex walls, annex roof, annex, etc.
